Tammy Key, Consultant

As a consultant on the Learning & Organizational Development Team at Vanderbilt, Tammy's goal is to help leaders and professionals become more effective in the people aspect of their career. She provides the tools, resources and education to help colleagues thrive in their work life.

On any given day you may find Tammy facilitating a customized MBTI team session, teaching an HR or professional development workshop, coaching or consulting with a leader, all to support professional growth.

Tammy has worked in training and organizational development for 17 years, eight years at Vanderbilt, and previously at CIGNA Government Services and the Frist Center at Belmont University. She often draws from her past experience as a social worker and an assistant director in the senior living industry.

Tammy is a MBTI Master Practitioner (she is a proud ENFP!) and a certified corporate coach through the Worldwide Association of Business Coaches. She enjoys spending a portion of her free time doing team building and training with ministry and non-profit teams; she can't help herself!
